When I the kid, the genre of computer video gaming was just growing. I remember having a TV hooked up to and including console with rotary-type joysticks. One could only play what they called 'tennis' or shoot a white rectangle with a lighting gun. That's about it: no fancy graphics, no sounds other than 'beep', and no color. Great things about these games were that they did not have any violence, but they lacked the skill to harm a Hdtv.
